Escapes of Water

Even the smallest of leaks can cause significant damage. If water has escaped from its storage, heating or distribution system, our experts can help.

Key Causes of Water System Failures

While careful maintenance helps prevent catastrophic failures, early signs of failure can be difficult to detect, as pipework may be covered by installation materials or buried underground, limiting accessibility during an inspection. Examples of typical escapes of water cases include:

- Separated joints
- Faulty or broken fittings and parts
- Materials/equipment failures
- Poor system design and installation
- Pressure problems (either high or low)
- 'Water hammer' issues
- Corrosion
- Frost damage and frozen pipes
- Sewage or foul water drainage problems
- Fraudulent or deliberately staged leaks
- Building defects
- Damp proofing issues in basements

We also investigate escapes of oil and other fluids.
